

ST PATRICK CEMETERY, KENT, WA

The Seattle Area's Irish Pioneer Cemetery

St. Patrick Cemetery was created when the O'Connell family in 1880 set aside 4½ acres on their farm south of Seattle to be a cemetery for the mainly Irish Catholic families in the area. They named it for St. Patrick, and in 1902, formally transferred title to the cemetery to the local Catholic Church for the sum of $1. Over the years, the cemetery fell into disrepair due to non-use, a lack of volunteers, and vandalism. Since the 1970s, all records, services and maintenance for St. Patrick have been provided by Gethsemane Cemetery in Federal Way.

The farm where St. Patrick Cemetery was started was owned by the O'Connell Family, shown here around 1904 with Richard and Sarah in the middle, children Richard and Catherine at rear, and Monica in front. Richard O'Connell was born in Co. Limerick in 1839 and Sarah (Mullen) was born in Co. Galway in 1870. After his first wife died, Richard married Sarah in 1887 and they had three children, Catherine (b. 1888), Richard (b. 1890), and Monica (b. 1897). Richard died in 1935 and Sarah died in 1952. Today, their grandson, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren still live on the original O'Connell family farm, located just down the hill from St. Patrick.

St. Patrick Pioneer Cemetery is located 1 mile east of Exit # 152 off I-5, on the corner of Orillia Rd and 204th Street in Kent, just east of Sea-Tac Airport.
